

August 18th

I was looking at a pair of eyes. Smoored and hollow.
Below them a snout. A pig's head. Mounted on top of the fence. When I moved the binoculars to the right I found another - the same pushed-in features the same hatch-like eyes. Now I could see them - faint blobs of light, one after the other on top of the fence, lined up like heads on medieval battlements, one every ten feet or so just like gargoyles on this side - stretching away into the distance. Where the fuck have they come from?
